- Choose the right home to provide comfort and care

Make an informed choice for yourself or someone you love

Research shows that the most common questions asked when choosing a nursing home are “Where is the facility located?” and “How much does it cost?” Seldom are any other questions taken into consideration. Yet, for a major life decision, careful research should be undertaken to ensure that you find the best possible care and the most enjoyable environment for yourself or your loved one. Making the Right Move was written both for seniors considering moving to a care facility or for anyone who is considering housing options for someone he or she loves. This book takes you step-by-step through the process of evaluating different facilities and their staff. The author uses real-life examples she has gathered from her own experiences as a registered nurse to explain what goes on behind the scenes at nursing home and similar facilities. Packed with checklists of questions to ask and forms for evaluating the answers, Making the Right Move: Housing Options for Seniors is a valuable and practical guide to staying focussed while making what can be difficult decisions. It examines issues including:

How to rate a nursing home

Supportive housing options with care components

Questions to ask the director of care

Finding elder-friendly environments

How to effectively deal with complaints and problems
