RACCONTO LUNGO (53 pagine) - FANTASCIENZA - Gli abitanti di un altro pianeta possono conoscere Dio? E quanto davvero lo conosciamo noi?

Fantascienza e religione: un tema affascinante che è stato affrontato in diversi grandi classici del genere. È il turno di Vittorio Catani, uno dei maestri della science fiction italiana, che lo affronta a modo suo, immaginando un mondo alieno, sul quale sbarca un astronauta terrestre. Un mondo i cui abitanti di Dio hanno esperienza diretta, quotidiana. Ma la meraviglia di questa scoperta per il protagonista della storia sarà guastata da una scoperta terribile.

Vittorio Catani è una delle colonne della fantascienza italiana. Scrive fantascienza fin dai tempi della rivista "Oltre il cielo"; è stato il vincitore della prima edizione del Premio Urania nel 1989; ha pubblicato innumerevoli libri e racconti in riviste e antologie, ed è l'autore che ha vinto il maggior numero di premi Italia nella sua carriera. I suoi lavori sono stati tradotti in una decina di lingue, dal francese al giapponese. Sempre curioso delle novità e al passo coi tempi ha prodotto negli anni audiodrammi, curato programmi radiofonici, ed è stato tra i primi collaboratori della rivista online "Delos Science Fiction" e di Fantascienza.com.
